Program Objectives

- Recognize the evolving epidemiology of oropharyngeal cancer, describe the current indications for HPV - vaccination and outline the opportunities and challenges related to screening for HPV-related oropharyngeal cancer
- Learn the complexities of working with transgender patients and the wide variety of otolaryngic services that benefit this population
- Review otolaryngological manifestations and common head and neck surgical interventions in inherited craniofacial conditions encountered in general and pediatric otolaryngology clinic
- Developing awareness of the otolaryngology manifestations of Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome as well as how suboxone and methadone appear to affect Pierre Robin Sequence

Program Overview

We are starting the 2019 NEOS year with Sex. Why not? Sex permeates many aspect of medicine from sexually transmitted diseases to genetic syndromes, from sexual harassment in the work place to competency with managing clinically and professionally LGBTQ and transgender patients. This session will focus on the importance of addressing sex (and genetics), sexual behavior, and sexual orientation as an integral part of the practice of medicine and the delivery of high quality healthcare as it relates to otolaryngological diagnoses and treatment.
